The course in trained attendance, which is under the direction of Miss Louise Henderson, consists of daily instruction for eleven weeks, with three afternoons of work a week in the hospital. Its purpose is the training of women for the care of convalescents and chronic invalids, but much of the work, especially that given their year, will be extremely useful in the care of soldiers in convalescent hospitals who have passed the dangerous stage of their hospital career but require careful nursing before going back to the front. well as a large percentage of the other
